

VIRGINIA RAMMED BY SHIP MONROE

Gun on Battleship Bent and Wrenched From Carriage.

STEAMER SPRINGS LEAK

Probable Court of Inquiry Will Be Asked to Fix Responsibility for Collision.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 3.—The first-class battleship Virginia was badly damaged as the result of being rammed while en route up the river this morning shortly after 10 o'clock by the old Dominion steamer Monroe, bound from New York.

Both vessels were on their way from Hampton Roads for this city when the Monroe attempted to pass the starboard side of the Virginia, but finding that she would go around should she continue her course, the captain of the Monroe attempted to make a change, and in doing so rammed the Virginia. As the result of the collision the bow of the Monroe was badly bent and twisted, causing her to leak slightly and badly scarring the large passenger list she carried.

A three-inch gun on the after starboard quarter of the battleship was bent and wrenched from its carriage, as was the captain's gig and a whaleboat on the starboard side.

No official statements have been issued here on the collision. It will probably require a court of inquiry or else a law court to fix the responsibility.

UTES COMING HERE TO SEE PRESIDENT

Reach Agreement After a Lengthy Pow-wow With Army Officers.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 3.—The Ute Indians and the Government have come to an agreement. It was decided today that the leaders of the Indians shall have a pow-wow with the Great White Father, and in the meantime the tribe shall go to Fort Meade in charge of Colonel Rodgers, of the Sixth Cavalry. Ratifications are to be issued to them there.

The agreement was the result of a twelve hours' conference. Several times the Indians left the conference vowing they would not return. They insisted they would not go back to Utah, and that they wanted a hunting ground. Colonel Rodgers and Capt. Carter P. Johnson told them President Roosevelt would take care of them, and Chief Unkaskin put it to the rest of the band in this way: "Roosevelt, 'he mighty hunter; he no want his children starve; he know Indians like heap big game; he give us good hunting ground."

Unkaskin, Black Whisker, and Red Cap will represent the tribe at Washington and urge the President to give them another place to hunt.

GYPSY QUEEN BRIDE FOUND

Sold to Ardent Suitor for $900 by Her Father, King of Tribe.

KEWANEE, Ill., Nov. 3.—Dinah Jones, queen of the largest tribe of gypsies in America, who has been missing since her marriage to John George six weeks ago, is at Cincinnati, Ohio, according to word received today by her father, Stevens Jones, king of the tribe. She is with distant relatives who, in accordance with her wishes, have concealed her whereabouts from her husband and all members of the tribe. The reason for her mysterious disappearance and for her hiding are not revealed.

Her father said tonight that in case it was domestic infidelity he would at once refund the $900 which John George paid him for his daughter's hand and assume protection over her again. Queen Dinah, as she is known to all gypsies, failed to return one afternoon when she had been out telling fortunes at Berwyn, Ill. It was feared she had been kidnapped and her husband, through advertisements in Chicago and other cities offered large sums for her return. He suspected later that she was in hiding either here or at La Salle and made searches in both cities, but did not find her. He finally returned to Berwyn, where he is said to be at present time. His wife spent some months at Cincinnati last year and went immediately to that city after leaving Berwyn.

It is believed she revealed her whereabouts out of regard for her mother, who recently submitted to a serious operation in a hospital here. The father of the queen says the courtship of his daughter by George was apparently favored by his daughter and that when the $900 was paid he entered no objection to her marriage. His love for his daughter, he declares, will not permit him to keep the money if it means trouble for the queen.

DIES FROM A SHOVE GIVEN BY LANDLADY

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 2.—As the direct result of a playful push, given him several weeks ago by his boarding house mistress, Michael Dewitz died today at Mayfield. He and the woman were having a playful scuffle, when he slipped and fell, striking his side against a washbasin. Several ribs were fractured and it is believed his death was caused by one of the broken ribs penetrating a vital organ.

NATIONAL CATHEDRAL RELIGION'S MONUMENT

Bishop Satterlee Tells of the Ideals and Objects of Magnificent Structure Soon to Occupy an Important Place in the District.

The Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, Bishop of Washington, under whose direction, with that of the Cathedral Chapter, and to whose untiring energies much of the present success of the Cathedral movement is due, discussed yesterday with a representative of The Times the purposes, ideals, and uses of a cathedral, and what the National Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul will stand for in the religious life of Washington and the Nation when it is completed.

"The Cathedral of Washington will stand on the brow of the hill as a ceaseless object lesson for God," said Bishop Satterlee, in speaking of the ideals of a cathedral, "in contrast to Athens, where we need in the religious life of Washington and the Nation when it is completed."

Uses of Great Cathedrals.
"The question is often asked," continued the bishop, "What use is a great cathedral in this practical age. Men say, 'We see at a glance the value of hospitals, and infirmaries, of schools and colleges, of libraries and museums of art, but fail to distinguish that of a costly cathedral. It seems like an anachronism in these days of modern civilization.'"

"In answer to this, if a great cathedral stands out as a witness for certain spiritual truths, for certain aspects of New Testament life and belief, for a side of the Christian religion which our modern one-sided Christianity has lost sight of and forgotten, can we call it useless anachronism?"

"If there ever was an age when the Church of Christ should stand forth as a fearless witness of its pre-eminent importance, it is in this dawning twentieth century. The temper of the age is sociological rather than theological. If churches and cathedrals are less important than schools and hospitals; however, it is not that we are less religious than our forefathers."

"The cathedral of the future, in its worship, should stimulate every nobler instinct of our manhood. While its form of prayer should be of course, the ancient liturgy of the church, outward forms and ceremonies should never obscure that high ideal of worship set forth by Christ himself. Under present circumstances, the Cathedral of Washington is undoubtedly destined to be come a great missionary center. Nay, it will stand there hereafter, as an object lesson in itself of the freedom of the gospel.

Objects Are Three-Fold.
"The objects of a cathedral are three-fold, first, last, and always it should fulfill Christ's own description of a church building that it should be a house of prayer for all people, free and open, with a welcome extended to every one who enters its doors, and also be a witness for Christ in the capital of the country and of the faith once delivered to the saints."

"Second, it is the bishop's church, in which is his cathedral or bishop's seat, where he can have the opportunity to exercise those apostolic functions of his office untrammelled and with perfect freedom, which he has no opportunity to do through parish churches."

"Third, it is the great mother church of the diocese, where all the larger functions, such as mass meetings, conventions and other diocesan gatherings can take place, free from the medieval laws, customs and associations, and traditions which limited the scope and fettered the use of European cathedrals."

Ideals of Washington Cathedral.
Returning to the ideals of the National Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul, Bishop Satterlee continued:

"The Washington Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul will emphasize from its position in the capital of the country, points of religious unions made rather than recognize nice points of religious differences. It will cling to all that is Scriptural, apostolic, and primitive in the life of American Christendom. The Cathedral, of St. Peter and Paul, while it enshrines whatever attracts us in the Christian architecture of the past, must, above all, rise to those sublime heights of faith which saints attained; while its every stone cries out 'Hosanna to the King David's son.'"

The Cathedral organization is to be made up in the following manner, fifteen members of the Cathedral Chapter, the bishop, seven clerical members, and seven lay members, who serve a two years' term of office. The direct cathedral officers are the bishop, the dean, the canon precentor, the canon missionary, the canon chancellor, and the canon almoner. Besides these is a Cathedral council composed of the bishop, and the seven lay members of the diocesan convention, the standing committee, archdeacons, deputies to the last general convention of the church, the secretary and treasurer of the diocese and the chancellor of the same.

These embraced politics, prognostications, phonetic spelling, simple living, divorce of titled Americans, echoes from the Maine Federation, and a clipping describing future travel between London and New York. A descriptive and illustrated talk upon the play of "Hawatha," as acted by the Offway Indians, was much enjoyed. The members were then invited by the hostess to attend a belated Halloween luncheon.

EMPLOYERS MEET; FORMULATE PLANS

New Association Anxious to to Extend Its Influence.

FAVORS MANUAL TRAINING

Suggestion to Establish School in Washington Affording Highest Degree of Industrial Education.

The Employers' Association of the Building Trades of this city, which was organized recently, held its first meeting Friday night in the rooms of the association in the Small building, corner of Fourteenth and G streets northwest. The meeting was one of a series to be held this winter for the discussion of subjects dealing with employers and employees.

At the Friday night meeting two subjects came up for discussion. One dealt with the proposition to form an association of all the employers in the District of Columbia. After a brief discussion a committee was appointed to confer with the several organizations composed of employers.

The most interesting topic discussed was the suggestion to establish an industrial school in Washington where boys could be taught trades and a higher degree of efficiency developed in craftsmanship than is to be found among the boys who are now turned out of the average manual training school. The school suggested is to be a public one.

A short address on trade schools was delivered by W. E. Alexandria, of New York. He is connected with the Industrial Association of America.

HOW STUART SAVED HIMSELF.

Gilbert Stuart, though a celebrated artist, was likewise a great braggart. On one occasion a great public dinner was given to Isaac Hill by the town of Boston, and he was asked to sit for his picture to the artist, according to Scrap Book.

When Hull visited the studio Stuart took great delight in entertaining him with anecdotes of his English success, stories of the Marquis of this and the Baroness of that, which showed how elegant was the society to which he had been accustomed.

Unfortunately, in the midst of this grandeur, Mrs. Stuart, who did not know that there was a sitters' room in the kitchen, and cried out: "Do you mean to have that lot of mutton boiled or roasted?" to which Stuart replied with great presence of mind: "Ask your mistress."

ARREST DR. HICKS UPON SUSPICION

Mystery in Transaction With Washington Savings Bank.

Upon suspicion that he was attempting to negotiate an illegal transaction to obtain money through the Washington Savings Bank, Dr. Samuel D. Hicks, Jr., forty years old, living at 1006 F street northwest, was arrested last evening by Central Office Detectives Warren and O'Dea.

Alleged to have represented himself as Ball, Hicks called on B. H. Warner, Jr., several days ago and said that he had a friend, Steven B. Hill, of Leesburg, Va., who had an account amounting to $350 in the Washington Savings Bank. He said that one of Mr. Ball's checks for $100 had not been honored by the bank, and that he had authorized him to call on Mr. Warner to begin proceedings to have the account withdrawn.

Mr. Warner wrote Mr. Ball, at Leesburg, but received no reply. He inquired at the bank and was told there was no such account on their books. Hicks called on Mr. Warner the second time, and produced a duplicate certificate of deposit on the bank, showing that he had a credit of $350. He also had a check made out for this amount. Lieutenant Peck, in charge of the Detective Bureau at night, communicated with Leesburg authorities last night, and learned that no such persons as Ball or Hill were known in the community. Hicks, however, was known to them.

ALLEGED SLAYERS FACE EACH OTHER

Men Held for Murder of Margaret Leslie, Actress, Examined.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Leonard Lippold and Howard Nicholas, charged with the murder of Mrs. Margaret Leslie, were brought face to face in the office of Chief of Police Collins tonight.

Both were nervous. Lippold was more ill at ease than Nicholas, for he had ridden all night and had had little to eat during the day.

Nicholas, who had already made a confession, naming himself and Lippold as the murderers, of one actress, greeted Lippold cordially enough, but the police officers who witnessed the meeting saw that each was distrustful of the other.

At first Lippold declared that he had taken no part in the murder of Mrs. Leslie. Gradually he receded from this position until he had made some statements that there were in accord with some of those that had been already made by Nicholas. The latter had told the police that it was Lippold who actually killed Mrs. Leslie by strangling her. Nicholas asserted that his part of the work had been to hold chloroform to her face.

Lippold was told of these statements by Nicholas as soon as the examination began. He at first denied that Nicholas' story was true, but after a time he admitted that Nicholas had accurately described some of his movements.
